By means of such careful economy and steady labor she has managed to bring up her three children ever since Mr. D.—died suddenly, nine years ago. Now, however, cardiac trouble has set in and she can no longer work hard.

Still, she keeps her tiny home clean and neat and trains her children to grow up into fine men and women and honest citizens. But her splendid courage and determination cannot enable her to do any labor, and the doctors say she must have absolute rest. The Charity Organization Society asks for $200 to assist her through the next six months. Contributions sent to the office, at 105 East Twenty-second Street, will be promptly acknowledged.

Her Pennies Too Few for Bond

SHE is a little Russian woman, with an invalid husband and a soldier son with the United States Expeditionary forces, living on her allotment, and she came yesterday into the Liberty Bank at Madison Square. Out of a deep pocket she gathered a handful of change, mostly pennies, and held it out, eagerly, proudly.

"I buy bond," she said with a happy smile. Mrs. David R. Smith, captain of the booth, counted the money There was just a dollar. She explained there ought to be $5 at first, and over the wrinkled face of the woman came a look of utter despair. Then she said suddenly: "Lady, every night my mother, who die in Russia ten year ago, come to me and ask me in my sleep if I have buy my bond yet. And she so sad that I have not. And we feel we must, so our soldier boy come back to us. Will not the

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Rodger De Theda Bara Brings a Cellu-loid Salome to Enliven
Broadway

Whatever feeling of resentment of the populace against Salome may still exist is in no way softened by Theda Bara's presentation of that young woman at the 44th Street Theatre.

This is the first time that the famous and bloodthirsty princess has been on the screen, although she is a familiar figure to all patrons of opera, theatre and vaudeville. In the film version one is impressed anew with the fact that Salome certainly was a very bad girl. Sometimes she even made Herod look like a piker, but then, Herod had a passionate attachment for Salome and love makes cowards of the best of men.

William Fox has spared no pains or expense to make the picture m magnificent spectacle, and he has not failed in his purpose. The only flaw is that it Thomas.

quotation by the ears. As part author of the play Mr. Ditrichstein missed an opportunity for doing a really worthwhile piece of work. As actor he flashed in occasional moments of the play, which was so divided in its impulses that it gave him little opportunity. Catherine Proctor as the hardleaded wife did what was possible for the unsympathetic part, Vivian Rushmore was exceptionally wooden in the part of the other woman.
